The Traditional Mauritian Sega locally known as Sega Tipik Morisien, also called Sega Tradisionel or sega ravann or only sega tipik is a performing art form which encompasses musical instruments, songs in the Mauritian creole language and dance. The instruments basically consist of the ravann, the maravann and the triyang.

The Sega tipik can be grouped in 2 categories, the formal and the informal performance.

The formal performance is often choreographed and performers where uniforms where generally woman wear long and large skirts often white and man wear rolled pants, colourful or plain shirts and straw hat. Presently, Sega Tipik Morisien is performed during folkloric festivals, national events like National Day celebrations, the commemoration of the Abolition of Slavery and Music Day and in even in hotels.

However, sega tipik is viewed in its simple form in informal performances. It is often performed in family events in the backyard of the house, on the beach or any place of gathering of family members and friends.

The traditional performance of Sega Tipik Morisien is divided into several stages:

- The heating of the ravann next to a fire to tune it
- The call of the ravann (lapel), given by a soloist and that motivates people to gather around the instrumentalists.
- The song, often an improvised threnody of antiphonal\(^1\) or responsorial\(^2\) form and the lyrics are simple and repetitive.
- The roll (roulad), which is danced by the assembly and punctuated by acclamations dynamising the dance (called choule).

The ravann players play different beats: the premie tanbour gives the tempo; the others will sizone (playing on the edge of the ravann to give a high-pitched sound). The rhythm of Sega Tipik Morisien is an ambiguity between duple and ternary rhythms with a syncopated effect (off beats).

\(^{1}\) Unlike the responsorial form, the choir in the antiphonal form repeats the sentences set by the soloist.

\(^{2}\) It consists in the enunciation of a series of sentences by a soloist that are answered by a choir (the response). This response may be sung in unison or in parallel intervals of fourths or fifths.
Singing, even if improvised, has to adhere to certain codes: the person singing will introduce the theme of his song for people to hear what he has to say. As soon as the singer sings “ola e a ti le lae” (onomatopoeia), the dancers prepare to enter the circle formed around the ravann players and the rhythm evolves into a more accelerated cadence.

The dance is generally performed in groups or by couples. They dance within the circle formed by musicians and assembly without making any physical contact. The women dancers hold their skirts in their hands (Vann Vane). They move their hands and the hips and move around with short steps.

Sega Tipik Morisien is ultimately bound to the history of Mauritius, taking its roots in the early 18th French colonisation and settlement of Mauritius. Sega Tipik Morisien is a legacy of the slave population born in the context of a colonial society. It was first mentioned by the traveller Bernadin de Saint Pierre in the 1770s as ‘Tschiega’ and in 1827 De Freycinet also refers it to a performance he observed as ‘chéga’ or ‘tchéga’, the music of black people.

During slavery sega tipik was a way to externalize the physical pain and moral repressions, it had a cathartic function. Sega Tipik Morisien was a cry from the soul of the slaves attempting to transcend the miseries of repressed freedom. It also expresses a yearning for forgotten homelands as well as the universal desire for joy and happiness. Whenever possible slaves gathered to sing their misery and dance, to forget their inhuman living conditions.

Formerly, Sega Tipik Morisien was also performed during funerary rites and to communicate with ancestors. This “Ritual Sega” started to be organised in the courtyards during Sega nights (sware Sega), and became a ‘backyard music’ secluded in the private space as these rituals were not accepted by Roman Catholic Church. From the 1975 recordings of story teller Nélzir Ventre, they were still being performed in the yard with guests present as he spoke of rituals and magical (sorcery) practices. However, this “Ritual Sega” is no more practiced.

After the abolition of slavery, Sega Tipik Morisien songs and dances were considered as a deviant behaviour. It was also perceived negatively by the free or coloured population. Sega Tipik Morisien musicians and singers were called ‘tcholo’ or ‘nwar moutcha’ as stated by Fanfan.

By the end of the 19th century, many settlements of ex-slaves and Liberated Africans emerged in coastal districts, far from the sugar plantations. In these regions, Sega Tipik Morisien started to be organised in the courtyards during Sega Tipik nights (Sware Sega Tipik), and became a ‘backyard music’ secluded in the private space. Sega Tipik Morisien was mainly organised in front of the house or in front of the shop (boutik) during Sega Tipik nights, as Josiane Kasambo, the doyenne of female Sega Tipik Morisien singer recounts. As far as she can remember, Sega Tipik Morisien was performed in front of one’s house and was called the Sega Tipik divan laport.

From the 1950s, Sega Tipik Morisien began to enter the main stream and open to every social class. A historic moment took place on 24th October 1964, when 'La nuit du Séga' (The Sega Night) was held at Le Morne Village. This was the first public demonstration of Sega Tipik Morisien that finally gave official recognition to the Traditional Mauritian Sega. It was from then that Mauritius discovered Ti-Frer, 64 years old, singing Fidelia and Roseda; other emblematic figures such as Michel Legris and Fanfan also became popular. As from then, Sega Tipik Morisien was being commercialised in Mauritius across the island in hotels.

Presently, Sega Tipik Morisien is performed during folkloric festivals, national events like National Day celebrations, the commemoration of the Abolition of Slavery and Music Day and in hotels. The traditional instruments are still being used and the lyrics have been adapted to contemporary Mauritian context.

Sega Tipik Morisien performance is an occasion to meet, share, and socialise, creating moments of gatherings furthering social cohesion and regulation around shared cultural practices.

2.0 CHARACTERISTICS OF THE ELEMENT

2.1 Associated tangible elements;
1- Musical instruments:
   Ravann: This is both a member of the membranophone family and that of idiophones. The ravann is a percussion instrument of some 60cm in diameter and 5 cm thickness. The musician is usually either seated on the ground either with the knee to the ground so that the other leg serves as support for the instrument. The left wrist (if the musician is right-handed), placed on the upper part of the ravann, ensures that it is stable while leaving the hand free to make short beats termed fwet (whip), with the little finger and the ring finger and sometimes the middle finger. The right hand hits the middle with full force or at the edges with various strokes.

   Maravann: A rectangular box mad of sugarcane flowers, wood or iron with seeds inside. The instrumentalist makes use of the sound value of the seeds moving inside the empty cavity, when it is shaken: the maravann is held horizontally and is shaken from left to right.

   Triyang: The triyang (triangle) is an idiophone. It consists of an steel or iron rod bent to the form a triangle with an opening at one end. Another steel or iron rod is hit against it. The rod varies in thickness according to the intensity of the sound desired. While playing, the instrumentalist holds the triangle in the left hand. The technique can be summed up in two movements: holding the triyang with the left hand and hitting the horizontal part with the rod. Reducing pressure the left hand increases the intensity of the sound.

Other crafted instruments like the bob are also used sometimes in the creativity process instruments like guitar; bongo and others are also added. However, the base remains the three initial instruments.

Products used for instruments are natural (goat skin, wood, sticks) and environment friendly and are available plentifully in the country.

There are several safeguarding measures already in place since the 1980’s on individual and group basis that is at the level of the community itself. The state has also started implementing several safeguarding measures.

- The oldest one was set up in the 1980s by the Grup Abaim at Cité Barkly, an underprivileged housing estate.
- MOU between Le Morne Heritage Fund and the Group ABAIM, for the training of youngsters in Sega Tipik Morisien Tipik.
- Furthermore, the collection of heritage music has been undertaken by Grup Abaim, an album together with an explanatory booklet on Sega Tipik Morisien Tipik and its accompanied instruments was produced in 2013.
- Others are Lespri Ravann in Cité Vallijee and the Art & Music Centre at La Pointe Tamarin which provide training to youngsters.
- Documentation and preservation of the main characteristics of this element are being ensured inter alia, by a manual on ravann, published by Menwar in 1999. Many authors have published books on Sega Tipik Morisien to ensure its viability like:
  - Méthode de ravanne: Ways of playing the "ravanne", traditional music instrument by Menwar
  - Séga, Témoignages anciens et recent, l’île Maurice by E. Richon, amongst others

- Video clips produced by individual artistic produced by individual artists are broadcast on regional TV channels (Kanal Austral and Noot TV), Sega Tipik Morisien songs on local public and private radios and local TV (Senn Kreol) to propagate the element.
- Sega Tipik Morisien concerts organised in hotels, private parties and in public events are regularly organised to keep the art form lively. Music and song contests further offer a means to acknowledge local groups thus ensuring continuous viability of the element.

- Preservation is ensured through the promotion of Kreol language, the medium of Sega Tipik Morisien Tipik through the creation of the Kreol Speaking Union and the introduction of Kreol as a subject and a teaching medium in schools. Furthermore, books on Sega Tipik Morisien music and artists have been published by the NMCAC which also hosts a permanent exhibition of musical instruments.

- Festival Internationale Kreol is an annual event since 2007 where a Sega Tipik Morisien Tipik performance is held at Le Morne during the first week of December (Rs 500k). The Festival Internationale Kreol also provides a platform to broaden the visibility of the Sega Tipik Morisien Tipik.
