The Weaving Naga motif is widely practiced in Laos. It is the art of producing a fabric with the design that is one of the motifs the most appreciated by communities throughout the country. It is woven by hand on a simple traditional wooden loom, and the equipment such as the beater comb is also a wooden frame with bamboo reeds. To complete weaving one Naga pattern can take several days.

The weaving techniques are based on traditional knowledge and skills dating back many centuries. The motif is created during the weaving process - it is neither embroidered nor printed afterward. The Naga motifs are mostly weaver with the supplementary weft, which can be discontinuous supplementary or continuous supplementary weft. Ikat is also a popular technique for creating the Naga design.

The Naga patterns can be woven in silk, silk organza, and cotton, and traditionally, the body part of the Nagas is mostly woven in natural white or one solid colour, with the crest predominating in powerful colours, to demonstrate the supernatural powers it possesses. The dyer must therefore prepare symbolic colours such as red dyes from stick lac, green from indigo and yellow wood mixed together, and gold from almond leaves.

Nowadays, the Naga motif is produced all the time and all over the country, as it is popularly used in woven cloths for wearing, especially on women’s sinh (skirt) which is worn in everyday life, and the sash which is worn during formal and ritual occasions.

Throughout Laos, women in almost every household of Tai-Kadai, and Mon-Khmer-speaking communities, practice weaving Naga motifs in their daily lives. While men more often use other art forms when applying this motif – such as in sculpture, wood carving, etc. However, there are no barriers of gender or age for producing and using this motif in weaving.

There are no specific roles or responsibilities for the production of the Naga motif as it is generally an individual practice done by the women of each family. Formerly, the know-how of each family or clan was kept as a secret from outsiders due to the high value, prestige, and sometimes economic value attached to the crafting of the textiles.

The Naga design textiles are used during the entitled life of a person. Newborn babies have Naga motifs on their blankets and on carrying cloths to protect their spirit from evil. Adults wear it... in their daily lives and for important ceremonies at the temple or for official events. The Naga motif is woven into the couple’s wedding outfits to bless them and bring prosperity.

Many women prepare Naga motifs to wear when they die, believing this powerful image will send them to heaven, and that from there they can deliver fortune back to the living family.

Parents make sure that they pass the knowhow to their children to perpetuate the tradition and the knowledge. In education and vocational centres, the theory and techniques of producing the Naga motif also exist in learning programs.

(iii) How are the knowledge and skills related to the element transmitted today?
Not fewer than 150 or more than 250 words

The knowledge and skill related to the element is transmitted in different forms and at different levels. On the family level, grandmothers and mothers teach their children to produce the Naga motif on textile for their household use, their attires, and for earning a living for the family.

Many vocational centres organize intensive and long-term courses to emphasize techniques and quality of weaving Naga motifs. There are also mobile training teams that travel to remote provinces to teach, update and encourage the weaving communities to preserve their ancient skills and develop their own designs based on the original character.

The Children Cultural Centres present in the main cities of Laos try to make children aware of the importance of the Naga motif and to teach them how to produce it from a young age.

At the university and institute level, the Naga motifs are taught in theory and in practical lessons. Interior Design and Fashion faculties in the National University also introduce students to the Naga design for use in their new creations.

(iv) What social functions and cultural meanings does the element have for its community nowadays?
Not fewer than 150 or more than 250 words

From ancient times until now, the function and cultural meaning of the Naga motif is unchanged in Lao communities. Lao people believe that their ancestors are Naga, living in the rivers, and who still live there and stay watching and safeguarding their descendants. Therefore, to show respect to the Naga, Lao people produce the Naga motifs on textiles and on household objects.

On temples, Naga images are placed on the roof, on staircases, and on pray utensils such as candle holders, and the channel used for pouring water onto the Buddha statues during Bun Song Khan – the Lao New Year.

Lao People carve or paint images of the Naga on their boats to pay respect and to have them to protect them when travelling.

One example of social practice: normally men in Laos when they reach the age of 22, or before getting married, they should perform “Buad Nak”. Nak is another word for Naga. A folktale recounts that in ancient times, when the Naga and Human worlds were connected, there was a young Naga who appreciated Buddhism and wanted to become a monk. He therefore transformed himself into a human and applied to be a monk. When he presented himself at the temple, the senior monk noticed his scales and realized that he was a Naga and refused to accept him as it was against the rules. To recognize his devotion to Buddhism, the “Buad Nak” was created to show appreciation to the Naga ever since.

(v) Is there any part of the element that is not compatible with existing international human rights instruments or with the requirement of mutual respect among communities, groups and individuals, or with sustainable development?

Not fewer than 150 or more than 250 words

There is no part of the element that is not compatible with international human rights instruments or with the requirement of mutual respect among communities, groups, and individuals. The use and exploitation of the Naga motif is consensual and non-conflictual as the whole community throughout Laos of women for weaving, and both genders in general, feel that they have common ownership.

The Naga design production is preserved promoted and developed in different ways and is sustainable from within the communities. In remote areas, the knowledge of the skill is passed on to young generations in different forms, verbally and by practicing within the family and the community. In cities, the methodology of creating the design exists in training courses and in school curriculums. This is to ensure that The Naga motif development is sustainable.

The Naga motifs can be crafted with a variety of natural materials and don’t require any particular rare substance, which could harm the environment. The respect and appreciation of Lao society to Naga motifs also helps to drive the development of this traditional art to stay alive.

2. Contribution to ensuring visibility and awareness and to encouraging dialogue

For Criterion R.2, the States shall demonstrate that ‘Inscription of the element will contribute to ensuring visibility and awareness of the significance of the intangible cultural heritage and to encouraging dialogue, thus reflecting cultural diversity worldwide and testifying to human creativity’. This criterion will only be considered to be satisfied if the nomination demonstrates how the possible inscription would contribute to ensuring the visibility and awareness of the significance of intangible cultural heritage in general, and not only of the inscribed element itself, and to encouraging dialogue that respects cultural diversity.

(i) How could the inscription of the element on the Representative List of the Intangible Cultural Heritage of Humanity contribute to the visibility of the intangible cultural heritage in general (and not only of the inscribed element itself) and raise awareness of its importance?

(i.a) Please explain how this would be achieved at the local level.

Not fewer than 100 or more than 150 words

Communities across the country will be made aware of the visibility of the inscription through a range of learning activities such as cultural, learning, and technical practice. The updated policy of the government to promote the building of the Handicraft Center across the country would provide support to the community to enable them to have their own permanent handicraft and cultural center.

The center will be the location where villagers display their traditional elements and their new creation, also the place for training for the younger generation on the ancient technical know-how of producing the textiles of Naga design. The center would also serve as a source for cultural study and research. These activities will ensure the Naga inscription associated with the history, belief and traditional rituals is not only visible on the textiles but embodied across the range of art forms surrounding the life of Lao.
(i.b) Please explain how this would be achieved at the national level.

There is already visibility at the national level because creators and users are already the majority of Lao women across the country, thus a count rising into the millions. However, inscription on the List of Intangible Cultural Heritage of Humanity will give realization to all stakeholders of the importance and value of this important element of their culture, and will thus encourage pride and even more production and use of the element.

Further documentation of the traditional usage of the textiles woven with the Naga motifs, and also the stories and folktales related to the designs, needs to be undertaken and then published. This will help to safeguard and promote the culture and encourage the wide transmission of knowledge.

The government organizations help the communities where possible with capacity building, in order to improve their knowledge and ability, in order to support them to fulfill their social and economical goals.

(i.c) Please explain how this would be achieved at the international level.

The government especially the Ministry of Information, Culture, and Tourism together with the community will cooperate with the international organizations for raising awareness about the inscription worldwide. The dissemination will be arranged through forums, seminars, and workshops, on how Naga design is into several art forms in Laos, included in the objects, and plays the important role in the literature, some epics telling that Vientiane city was built by King of Naga named Sisattanak, therefore remained now Sisattanak district to praise the Naga King. Similar to LuangPrabang, an epic mentioned the town is protected by 15 different Naga families, located in a different part of the rivers.

Also proposed is a documentary film to be shown to international TV as an effective way to promote the inscription. Cultural tourism will also be encouraged to include this element, to provide an opportunity for international travelers to absorb Lao culture and appreciate the inscription.

(ii) How would dialogue among communities, groups and individuals be encouraged by the inscription of the element?

Inscription of the element will support dialogue amongst numbers of stakeholders, it will encourage the growth of cooperation within the practitioners, consciousness among the civil society groups engaged in raising awareness of the intangible cultural heritage, and responsiveness among the local and national leaders who play a key role in safeguarding the element. Its inscription will enhance respect for its bearers, thus encouraging dialogue among Lao weavers to be more inspired and inventive. Civil society as a whole will be inspired to ensure the preservation of the element.

The inscription will encourage Lao people to take a renewed interest in Naga motif weaving. The consumers will be motivated to buy more Naga design products in appreciation of the creativity and skills of the weavers. This increasing appreciation will help the weavers economically. Further, the inscription will enlarge both local and global attention to the element, therefore developing dialogue within Laos and elsewhere.
(iii) How would human creativity and respect for cultural diversity be promoted by the inscription of the element?

Not fewer than 100 or more than 150 words

The inscription of the element will showcase cultural heritage through input from many stakeholders, weavers, craft development organizations, suppliers of raw materials, farmers, other fiber makers, from different social and economic backgrounds, both rural and urban, rich and poor working together enriching the products.

Inscription of the element will highlight the Nagas woven fabric, especially in the Sinh (tube skirt) with Nagas designs, significant because of the beauty of design and also its cultural value. In families parents will teach their children to wear an appropriate Naga design to suit each occasion. Some Naga figures are kept only for the shaman to wear when she conducts the healing ritual. The international community will discover the uniqueness of Nagas motif and Laos creativity. Moreover, the inscription will exemplify the extraordinary craftsmanship of the weavers, their cultural identity and symbolize the historical continuity of this element in the world of cultural diversity.

3. Safeguarding measures

For Criterion R.3, States shall demonstrate that 'safeguarding measures are elaborated that may protect and promote the element'.

3.a. Past and current efforts to safeguard the element

(i) How is the viability of the element being ensured by the communities, groups or, if applicable, individuals concerned? What past and current initiatives have they taken in this regard?

Not fewer than 150 or more than 250 words

The weaving community and all the other groups involved in the process of Nagas weaving consider the element as their long-standing craft heritage. The element survived in the past due to the ingenuity of its practitioners who kept on preserving the traditional art of Nagas weaving and handing down their knowledge and skills to the next generation to perpetuate their craftsmanship. The high appreciation of the Nagas bottom hem and Skirt by the Lao women also played a key role in ensuring the viability of the element.

The cost of Nagas weaving started rising in the late 1980s, which threatened the viability of the element domestically. The practitioners succeeded in enhancing productivity to cope with the increasing cost. They then modified it to a less complex design to reduce time and labour of production, this helped consumers were able to afford the work and keep the design sustainable.

In the last few decades, there has been an active collaboration between the practitioners and the other stakeholders to ensure the viability of the element. Many individuals and non-profit organizations have been active in ensuring the viability of the element through marketing, craft exhibitions, research on traditional Nagas designs, documentation of various aspects of the element, and advocacy for strengthening safeguarding measures. The government also came forward to provide low-interest loans to the weavers to support their production. In response to the demand from the Nagas weavers, the Government remind them the capital of Laos was a Nagas city in the lao language is “Nakhon Sisattanahakhud”.

In addition in 2010 a book was published, titled “figuré du Naga dans le tissage Lao-Tai” on the Naga motifs, funded by the Lao Government, Ministry of Information and Culture, the Institute of Research of Culture and the French Government.

The National Museum, private museums and the Lao Women’s Association continue to promote the historic and artistic value of Naga weaving, displaying an array of splendid Naga sinh (traditional Lao skirt) and headscarf showcasing traditional craftsmanship. Many weavers across the country and in remote areas (more than 1,000) have little or no access to direct support of the conservation of the Naga motif, which should be preserved. Accordingly the Lao National Museum has held a Traditional Handicraft Exhibition annually since 2000. Private museums also display an array of Naga sinh and headscarves, to celebrate the element. These exhibitions enable some of the Master Weavers to demonstrate their weaving skills and it preserves the element. The best weavers are acknowledged with awards, most particularly at the Festival of Weaving between the Laos and the Kingdom of Thailand.

The Small and Cottage Industries Corporation has been established in Vientiane, in Luangprabang and the Houaphan Province now considered to be the hometown of the Naga motif, as a result Houaphan Province has become a nucleus of producers, retailers and consumers.

Not fewer than 500 or more than 750 words

Various elements of traditional craftsmanship have developed in Lao PDR throughout its long history, and their knowledge and skills have been transmitted from generation to generation by its practitioners with active entrepreneurs. Naga weaving is one of the most outstanding elements of traditional craftsmanship that has been handed down to us.

During the long process of preparing the nomination file of the element, the previous Institute of Research of Culture under the Ministry of Information and Cultural, recently the Ministry of Information, Culture and Tourism (MICT), association Lao Women’s Union, the National Institution of Fine Arts, National Assembly held extensive consultation with Naga weavers, traders, entrepreneurs, researchers, academia, media and related public organizations to take a comprehensive look at Naga weaving both as an element of the intangible cultural heritage that strengthens the identity of the Naga products and as a factor that has great economic and social impact on the Community through job creation and poverty alleviation. As a result of these consultations, a consensus has been developed for undertaking a comprehensive set of actions by different public and private sector stakeholders to safeguard Naga weaving as an element of the intangible cultural heritage of humanity in the following ways: 1) collection, identification, research, documentation and display, 2) preservation and protection, 3) promotion and enhancement, and 4) revitalization.

1) Collection, identification, research, documentation and display: There are more than 35 traditional designs which the Naga weavers have imitated from the natural surroundings. Some private sector organizations, researchers and NGOs have been working for years to identify and preserve the traditional designs and exclude the non-traditional, external ones, in order to safeguard the purity of the traditional designs. This work continues on to this very day and, they are continuing to update data, names, local or traditional names, commerce or industries name, by year and then publish these in the second inventory of Traditional Fine Arts of Lao PDR including Naga motifs.

The Ministry of Industry and Commerce, Ministry of Labour and Social Welfare, association of the Lao Women's Union, Lao Handicraft Association and villages selected will work with the private sector to reinforce their effort with the active involvement of several public organizations; The National Institute will assist with research and documentation, Private Museums for collection, identification and display of representative specimens of Naga and some of the most renowned Master Weavers to produce some Naga masterpieces. A truly collaborative effort.

2) Preservation and protection: Both public and private sector stakeholders have agreed that the Naga weavers themselves can preserve and protect Naga weaving as they have done for centuries, in the past. Therefore, the Ministry of Industry and Commerce, acting through the Small and Cottage Industries Corporation and the Government Bank, will ensure that the Naga weavers are able to get easy access to the raw materials and low-interest loans to make their profession economically profitable so that they are encouraged to transmit their knowledge and skills from generation to generation.

3) Promotion and enhancement: Inscription of the element is expected to reinforce the promotion and enhancement of Naga weaving at the regional, national and international levels. The Government, particularly the Ministry of Information, Culture and Tourism, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Ministry of Industry and Commerce, the Lao handicraft Association, Lao Association Women's Union, the media and other concerned organizations will work together to promote Naga as an object of traditional culture that enhances Lao national identity on the one hand and on the other as a commodity whose promotion and enhancement will directly benefit the Naga weavers.

4) Revitalization: The nomination process has received tremendous support and raised awareness of the Naga widely, with each group contributing on ways and means to revitalize Naga weaving as an element of the intangible cultural heritage of humanity. The Naga itself, as a commercially promising product for national economy, also further raised awareness and support of Laos heritage during the consultations with the stakeholders. The Ministry of Information, Cultural and Tourism, through its connections and the local government representatives of the region, will make efforts to implement the recommendations received from the discussions with the stakeholders at the national and local levels respectively to revitalize Naga weaving.

Fieldwork was conducted in the Lao Women’s Union where the opinions of the Master Weavers were listened to in particular.

Not fewer than 300 or more than 500 words

An urban management plan and inventory of Luang Phrabang’s architecture, traditional, colonial and religious sites of exceptional significance was established. The inventory documents traditional ornamental patterns used to decorate the temples demonstrating how the Naga is intrinsically related to Buddhism, as represented in temple decorations and in weaving.

The Naga (or Nak), often thought to be in conflict with Buddhist principles is actually a noble creature and keen protector of Buddhism. As legend has it, Naga actively set out to protect Buddha (Paragraph 22 Page 79, “Figures Du Naga Dans Le Tissage Lao-Tai”) and the Naga became a protector of Buddhism.

The Naga followed Buddha demonstrating great favour and asked to become a monk, Buddha refusing because Naga was an animal. Naga tried fooling Buddha by taking on the form of a man, however, Buddha at nightfall recognized the Naga amongst the sleeping souls. In turn, Naga renounced his ambition to become a monk imploring Buddha to allow him to continue to contribute to Buddhism. Since that time, those who wish to don the temple robes are called Bouad Nak (or Naga, in front of the title monk). The links between Naga and Buddhism are numerous and positive, which explains the omnipresence and multiple representations of Naga images in Lao temples.

The preparation of this document, to nominate Naga Weaving and the Naga motif is the result of a joint effort between the State Parties and a wide variety of other concerned parties namely, practitioners, local governments, civil society groups, NGOs, entrepreneurs, experts, researchers and academics. State Parties are represented through the Ministry of Information, Culture and Tourism and its affiliated organizations including the Research Institute of Culture, the Lao Women’s Union and many private parties.

The nomination was prepared by the Research Institute of Culture under the Ministry of Information, Culture and Tourism, the Lao Women’s Union and the National Committee for Cultural Science who held extensive consultations with Naga weavers, traders, entrepreneurs, researchers, academics, media, related public and private organizations. The nomination put forward by the stakeholders was endorsed following Inter-Ministerial meetings and roundtable discussions. Stakeholders included the Naga Manufacturers and Lao Handicraft Association and the Lao Women’s Union.

All concerned parties actively participated in the process of preparing the various documents and in all other actions taken for this element to be recognized internationally.

A comprehensive review of the Naga Sinh (Jupe) as an element of intangible cultural heritage yielded that it strengthens the identity of the Naga producers and is a major factor having great economic and social impact for and on the Community through job creation, poverty alleviation and identity.

4.b. Free, prior and informed consent to the nomination

The Institute is working hard to assist Lao artisans preserve and promote Lao handicraft traditions, especially with Lao woven textiles, focusing on quality, design and an export market.

A number of meetings have focused discussion on preserving traditional Lao Fine Arts especially Lao woven textiles and knowledge around natural dyes and cataloguing these.

The last meeting held in 2015, in The Culture Hall by the Ministry of Information, Culture and Tourism, a large number of women from the industry, Government Officers, weavers, the bearers of the element, endorsed their consent for the nomination of the “Traditional Art of Naga Weaving” for the Representative List of the Intangible Cultural Heritage of Humanity.

A consent letter to this effect, in both Lao and English, was obtained from the representatives of the Community: In this letter the representatives of the practitioners of the element gave their consent to the nomination of the Traditional Art of Naga Weaving for its inscription in the 2021 Representative List of the Intangible Cultural Heritage of Humanity.

4.c. Respect for customary practices governing access to the element

Access to certain specific aspects of intangible cultural heritage or to information about it is sometimes restricted by customary practices enacted and conducted by the communities in order, for example, to maintain the secrecy of specific knowledge. If such practices exist, demonstrate that the inscription of the element and implementation of the safeguarding measures would fully respect such customary practices governing access to specific aspects of such heritage (cf. Article 13 of the Convention). Describe any specific measures that might need to be taken to ensure such respect.

If no such practices exist, please provide a clear statement that there are no customary practices governing access to the element in at least 50 words.

Not fewer than 50 or more than 250 words

No aspect of Naga weaving is restricted by customary practices. The weaving units are open to visitors. Visits to the weaving units are encouraged by the practitioners as visitors, often fascinated by the weaving process; feel delighted to buy Naga products on the spot. The practitioners have expressed their interest in disseminating their knowledge related to Naga weaving within the country and beyond. They are also willing to extend full cooperation to the researchers interested in documenting the entire process of preparing the raw materials and in the process of Naga weaving. However, any deviation from the traditional designs of Naga weaving is highly discouraged by the weavers. With the growing popularity of the element, some wholesale buyers proposed to introduce new designs to make Naga more appealing to the new generation of users. The practitioners, who take great pride in the element, opposed the adoption of any external designs that do not conform to the traditional designs of Naga weaving.

5. Inclusion of the element in an inventory
For Criterion R.5, States shall demonstrate that the element is identified and included in an inventory of the intangible cultural heritage present in the territory(ies) of the submitting State(s) Party(ies) in conformity with Articles 11.b and 12 of the Convention.

The inclusion of the nominated element in an inventory should not in any way imply or require that the inventory(ies) should have been completed prior to the nomination. Rather, the submitting State(s) Party(ies) may be in the process of completing or updating one or more inventories but have already duly included the nominated element in an inventory-in-progress.

Provide the following information:

(i) Name of the inventory(ies) in which the element is included:

There are many books on motif Naga and others motifs but not inclusive of all embroidery motifs or embroidery procedures. The requirement is an inventory of motif embroidery.

In particular, an inventory was created on the Naga motif based on research of Lao-Tai textiles. This inventory is published in a book, with the title "Figure du Naga dans le tissage Lao-Tai". The information included describes the elements of the motif, the cultural heritage, and other essential information. As Lao is graduating from Least Developed Country Status, as part of the process, it is improving and strengthening its legal frameworks and tools. Going forward it is anticipated that as the country builds its legal structures, such inventories will be legalized. For now, the Ministry of Information, Culture, and Tourism, the arm of the government responsible and accountable for cultural preservation, recognizes the book entry, as the legal description of the cultural heritage of the Naga motif.

(ii) Name of the office(s), agency(ies), organization(s) or body(les) responsible for maintaining and updating that (those) inventory(ies), both in the original language and in translation when the original language is not English or French:

The fine arts and Heritage department of the Ministry of Information, Culture, and Tourism with Lao handicraft association was assigned as Secretary of President of National Committee for World Heritage responsible for maintaining and updating those inventories. These inventories both in the Lao language and the translation into French or English should be checked with the Lao Handicraft Association who are representative of producers, fabricators, also with the National Committee for the Management of Fine Arts, National Institute for Cultural Research, and Lao Women's Association Union

(iii) Reference number(s) and name(s) of the element in the relevant inventory(ies):

Following ratification to the Convention for the Safeguarding of Intangible Cultural Heritage in 2009, the nomination was prepared by the Research Institute of Culture under the Ministry of Information Culture and Tourism. The updated Heritage law was approved by the team nominated by the Minister, as President of the National Committee for World Heritage for identifying domains and elements. Each trimester, report on the progress of the implementation of the convention 2003, including the regular updating of the inventory, new elements added and revision of existing information on the evolving nature of the elements, forwarded to National assembly meeting in each year.

An inventory was conducted as research of Lao-Tai textile but the book classified as an ordering of Naga motifs and the Ministry of Information, Culture, and Tourism requires legalizing as a result of the Minister's call for legality.

Artisanat of handicraft, Paragraph (vi) artisanat; of the decision on intangible cultural heritage (Décision sur le patrimoine culturel immatérialisé) No 143 / MICT date 02/10/2014

(v) Explain how the element was identified and defined, including how information was collected and processed 'with the participation of communities, groups and relevant non-governmental organizations' (Article 11.b) for the purpose of inventorying, including reference to the role of the gender of the participants. Additional information may be provided to demonstrate the participation of research institutes and centers of expertise (max. 200 words).
Many private individuals, researchers, academics, groups, relevant Nongovernmental Organizations and International Organizations, interested in aspects of the Lao textile, being included in domains of intangible cultural heritage of humanity, assisted in the process by giving access to their private collections containing some rare Naga Sinh (skirt or Jupe) and documentations.

In addition to the Ministry of Information, Cultural and Tourism and the Ministry of Labour and Social Welfare, Lao Handicraft Association, Lao Women’s Union many private entrepreneurs and communities contributed directly and indirectly to the nomination process.

The Institute Research of Culture and Socio-Science and National Institution of Fine Arts, identified and defined, for safeguarding, the element through various statutory institutions. The Lao Women’s Union weavers and Naga producers identified the element as a major factor of great economic and social impact on the community, through job creation and poverty reduction.

Meanwhile, the Lao Government, supported by international organizations, published many books on Lao textile and Naga motifs including a definitive book on Nagas motifs, “Figure Du Naga Dans Le Tissage Lao-Tai” 2010; In it the art of Naga weaving was thoroughly detailed and defined, including an inventory first adopted in 2014 and updated annually until 2020.

(vi) Indicate how often the inventory(ies) is(are) updated (periodicity) (max. 100 words).

Inventories updated annually.

The Ministry, Presiding over the National Committee for Heritage (NHC), oversees invitations to Institutes, Provinces, researchers, Lao Women’s Union, Youth Associations, communities, groups, and individuals regarding each domain, adopting an agreed inventory.

After unanimous decisions on the elements, the NHC updates the inventory approved by the President of NHC.

In April 2022 inventory process is updated, through revised organization and operation, adopted at the end of 2021, including a new NHC, to ensure efficiency, non-overlapping and alignment with socio-economic developments."

(Prime Minister’s Decree the reorganization of Ministry Information, Culture and Tourism No 678/PM, 21 December 2021.)

(vii) Explain how the inventory(ies) is(are) regularly updated. The updating process is understood not only as adding new elements but also as revising existing information on the evolving nature of the elements already included therein (Article 12.1 of the Convention) (max. 200 words).

Each year, communities, groups, relevant non-governmental organizations and private individuals, interested in aspects concerning the Lao textile, submit comments, concerns, adjustments, and additional information collected to the National Committee for Heritage responsible for domains of intangible cultural heritage.

The provincial and local community representative’s submissions to the National Committee for Heritage are accompanied by evidence collected through the meetings with local assemblies. In parallel, they assist in the process by giving access to private collections containing some rare Naga Sinh (skirt or Jupe) as well as a rare element, domains. The updating process, in addition to adding new elements, includes revising existing information, incorporating new data, text revision, and occasionally the decision to delete some elements, only after a unanimous committee decision.

National lists of intangible cultural heritage elements are of an evolving nature and demand rigour in safeguarding and preserving the nominations, in a manner geared to the Lao situation.

Especially important is the updating of the inventory including oral traditions and expressions, languages (Pali and Sanskrit manuscripts), social practices, rituals and festive events, knowledge, and practices concerning nature and the universe. These reviews were held with participants of communities associated with the Buddhism association and venerable monks;

(viii) Documentary evidence shall be provided in an annex demonstrating that the nominated element is included in one or more inventories of the intangible cultural heritage present in the territory(ies) of the submitting State(s) Party(ies), as defined in Articles 11.b and 12 of the Convention. Such evidence shall at least include the name of the element, its description, the name(s) of the communities, groups or, if applicable, individuals concerned, their geographic location and the range of the element.

a. If the inventory is available online, provide hyperlinks (URLs) to pages dedicated to the nominated element. Attach to the nomination print-outs of relevant sections of the content of these links. The information should be provided in English or French, as well as in the original language if different.

b. If the inventory is not available online, attach exact copies of texts concerning the element included in the inventory. These texts should be provided in English or French as well as in the original language if different.

Indicate the materials provided and – if applicable – the relevant hyperlinks:

The inventory of Naga designs is not yet online, (refer to our adopted inventory 2014, announcing 28 (twenty-eight) Naga features listed, for details). Many Naga descriptions are found on the individual web pages of weaving communities, but mainly in the form of commercial information rather than research documents. The Ministry of Information, Culture, and Tourism in association with the Lao Handicraft Association is planning to list, online, these traditional Naga motifs and promote them.

The Lao Handicraft Association continues to conduct dialogue with diverse weaving communities across the country to examine new findings, existing commonalities (similarities in name and description) and recording them; For example, the Naga Multiple-Face, Nak Kap Boua, and Nak Lao that Lue weaving communities are added to the list. Nak Blow Fire, Khom Nak also descriptions that Houa Phanh’s weavers have utilized for a long-time are then included.
