EXARC is the global network of professionals for those active in Archaeological (Open-Air) Museums as well as in Experimental Archaeology, Ancient Technology and Historical Interpretation. Our mission is to make the archaeological past widely accessible through creating opportunities for researchers and practitioners to collaborate, exchange information, and share best practices in archaeological open-air museums, experimental archaeology research, educational and presentational tools and demonstrations of cultural heritage, both tangible and intangible. We do this by creating opportunities for researchers and practitioners to collaborate, exchange information and share best practices. It includes facilitating both research and education.

The EXARC website highlights its members (institutional and individual) as well as member Universities and other Higher Education Centres teaching EA, as well as Living History or Ancient Technology Groups. All members are shown on an interactive map, showcased with a short biography, including contact details and official website.

EXARC hosts two series of international conferences: the REARC series and the EAC series. The Reconstructive and Experimental Archaeology Conferences (REARC) take place in North America, while the International Experimental Archaeology Conferences (EAC) are organised in Europe. Apart from that, EXARC supports and co-organises several other conferences and workshops, all within the themes of our four 'legs'.

In the past year, EXARC launched new and free initiatives for members and non-members: a monthly #FinallyFriday session where 2 EXARC members share different perspectives on the same topic, with speaker/listener live interaction; ‘The EXARC Show’ monthly podcast, and themed interactive chats sessions to strengthen research and dialogue between practitioners. These initiatives and our virtual conferences testify to our commitment to the UN’s Sustainable Development Goals for museums in particular, by providing inclusive and equitable quality education promoting lifelong learning and the preservation of our cultural heritage.

In addition to the online and digital events, the website and the events calendar, EXARC champions Open Access through its Journal publication, featuring the latest developments in fieldwork, academic research, museum studies, living history interpretation and ancient technology, as well as presenting book reviews, conference and event reports, interviews with leading personalities and featured museums and institutions.

EXARC is the international ICOM affiliated organisation of Archaeological Open-Air Museums and Experimental Archaeology, as well as Ancient Technologies and Historical Interpretation. EXARC’s aim is to establish a high standard of scientific research and public presentation. Our network includes close to 400 members in over 30 countries, including: (Institutional members) 113 museums, 13 universities and 33 associations; and (Individual Members) 239 free-lance cultural heritage professionals working in museums, experimental archaeologists, staff at archaeological (open-air) museums, live interpreters, archaeo-technicians, traditional craftspeople and students.

EXARC is based in Leiden, in The Netherlands. The EXARC Secretariat manages day-to-day responsibilities including administration and finance, creating and maintaining the website content, and creating all graphic design products, including the EXARC Journal online and EXARC Journal Digest printed version. The Secretariat also supports publishing, marketing, working with volunteers, advising interest groups on Experimental Archaeology and initiatives for new open air museums, co-authors funding applications, and manages funded EXARC-led and other joint projects. Our vast team of volunteers bring with them additional skills: from Experimental Archaeology, Cultural Heritage and Museology, to web design, database development, marketing, media strategy, civic engagement and humanitarian response. The Board is made up of international museum professionals, professors, experimental archaeologists and who represent the four legs of EXARC.

The EXARC JOURNAL (established 2004) is published as an online Journal (open access) four times a year and is a discussion platform for the exchange of experience and information in all aspects of archaeological experiment, (re)construction, the use of models in education as well as live interpretation including ‘living history’. Each issue contains about 10-25 articles. Our international editorial board provides free assistance with anyone wishing to publish with us. We also offer advertising space in our Journal to reach many archaeological open-air museums as well as other readers across the globe. The EXARC Journal Digest is a full-colour printed publication, published twice a year for EXARC members only. It features chosen articles, in an abridged form, previously published in our online EXARC Journal Issues. The EXARC Journal earned DOAJ (Directory of Open Access Journals) status in 2019. See https://exarc.net/journal

EXARC offers a three-tiered system of membership, making membership available and inclusive, based on EU and World Average Purchasing Power Parity (PPP).

EXARC is a democratic organisation and every member is eligible to vote at the AGM.

In 2020, EXARC organised its first fully digital online conference in response to the world-wide pandemic. This particular event focussed specifically on safeguarding intangible cultural heritage and was entitled ‘Documentation Strategies in (Archaeological) Open Air Museums. Participants hailed from several countries in Europe, as well as from Australia, Saudi Arabia and the USA.

More recently, EXARC organised the #EAC12 (March 2021) which showcased 167 presentations from 72 countries, over four days and 1,900 registered participants. The content was made available as open access via #EXARC Youtube Channel, supported by live interaction on Discord with 1,200 global participants. The video presentations will remain online in perpetuity, thus reaching more people. See https://exarc.net/meetings/eac12 for more information. EXARC considers the #EAC12 to be an active tool in helping to solve societal issues and it is coherent with the Sustainable Development Goals outlined by the United Nations and which EXARC has adopted.

6.d. Description of the organization's competence and expertise

Please provide information on the personnel and members of the organization, describe their competence and expertise in the domain of intangible cultural heritage, in particular those that demonstrate the capacities of the organization to provide advisory services to the Committee, and explain how they acquired such competence. Documentation of such competences may be submitted, if necessary, under section 8.c below.

Not to exceed 200 words; do not attach additional information

The full Board list with biographies is available here: EXARC Board | EXARC. Board members are experienced in their fields, and may also have additional national or international experience in other useful fields such as culture, finances, law, economy, commerce, social and society, marketing.

The majority of EXARC’s activities are executed by a large team of about 100 passionate and dedicated volunteers. Additionally, EXARC can also call on the expertise of our membership. We are a collective of 350 members in 40 countries, including 125 museums, 250 individual members, 12 universities, plus living history groups, experimental archaeology associations (which include many independent researchers), and student groups. EXARC connects people by acting as a bridge between professionals in open-air archaeological museums, traditional museums, and scientists and scholars working in universities. EXARC is an inclusive network in which professors and non-archaeologists present side by side at meetings. By sharing the knowledge together, we can make an important contribution to society.
The organisation is fluid and adaptable, listening carefully to new ideas from members and non-members. EXARC has a large network and presence on social media which it uses to reach museums, professionals and the public.

7. The organization’s experiences in cooperating with communities, groups and intangible cultural heritage practitioners

The Committee will evaluate whether NGOs requesting accreditation ‘cooperate in a spirit of mutual respect with communities, groups and, where appropriate, individuals that create, practise and transmit intangible cultural heritage’ (Criterion D). Please briefly describe such experiences here.

Not to exceed 350 words; do not attach additional information

From its inception the focus of EXARC’s activities has been to facilitate the exchange of information on tangible and intangible cultural heritage, initially through meetings and workshops, and then via cooperation programmes for the European Union where we have been able to add value to the dissemination of historical knowledge and cultural heritage, cooperation projects with other countries outside the European Union, such as the USA (with the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation fellowship), REARC, and internationally with ICOM, The International Council of Museums. EXARC’s status as ICOM Affiliated Organisation (AO) is beneficial to all EXARC’s members, to ICOM and to EXARC itself. Our most relevant partners are the international committees ICMAH, the International Committee for Museums and Collections of Archaeology and History and CECA, the International Committee on Museum Education and Cultural Action. EXARC is also member of ICOMOS.

With members everywhere, EXARC can ensure an exchange of knowledge, experience and best practice. Themes cover not only public archaeology, experimental archaeology, ancient skills, living history and interpretation, but also exchange of staff, visitor dialogue, marketing & communication and of course museum management. EXARC cooperates with several organisations which are important to our members. In addition to ICOM, this includes NEMO (Network of European Museum Organisations), IMTAL (Museum and Theatre Alliance), and REARC. EXARC members form a mutually supportive network. Small and larger scale cooperation within the association is organised individually to ensure better success. Since its beginning, EXARC has initiated a number of international projects, some of which were funded by the European Union. New ideas are developed continuously and are discussed by the members of EXARC. EXARC also joins projects with non-EXARC members if these help us in any of our four themes, such as “European Archaeology Days”.

EXARC provided funding for twinning projects to provide results that can be applied by both participants in their professional work, and with a wider application for other EXARC members.

This year, we have created the EXARC Experimental Archaeology Award, which offers micro-funding for worthwhile archaeological experiments, regardless of where in the world they are conducted or by whom.

Secretary: Milica Tapavički-Ilić PhD (RS)
Period: 2018-2020
Dr. Tapavički-Ilić studied Archaeology at Belgrade University, completing her B.A. with the theme, "Influences of Celtic-Scordiscian and the Roman Pottery at the Territories of Pannonia Inferior and Moesia Superior". Later, she continued her postgraduate studies at Belgrade University, receiving her M.A. with the theme, "The Scordiscians During Roman Times". From 1998 to 2002, she did her Ph.D. studies at Philipps-Universität in Marburg (Germany), as a DAAD Scholarship holder, receiving her Ph.D. with the thesis: Vergleichende Untersuchung zur Romanisierung der Treverer und der Skordisker.
The focus of her scientific research is the process of Romanisation and aspects of "barbarian" (autochthonous) material cultures within Roman culture.
Treasurer: Caroline Jeffra MA PhD (NL)
Period: 2020-2023
My first involvement with experimental archaeology was in 2005 when I started the MA in Experimental Archaeology at University of Exeter. I completed the MA with Distinction and continued to complete a PhD (Exeter, 2011) using experimental archaeology as a major component of my thesis. I have published a number of articles which address or make use of experimental archaeology and my current research at UvA is explicitly dependent on further experiments. One of my successes has been in identifying the presence of a combination technique in Bronze Age Cretan and Cypriot potting. Rather than building pottery wheels and starting to wheel throw vessels, my research has shown that the combination technique of wheel coiling was used - potters used rotation in differing proportions to complete the construction of partially coil-built pots.

Board Member: Professor Dr Linda Hurcombe (UK)
Period: 2018-2020
Linda Hurcombe has broad interests in artefacts and material culture studies. She is especially interested in ethnographies of craft traditions, the sensory worlds of prehistoric societies and the manner in which archaeologists and anthropologists approach artefact studies. She has also worked on gender and material culture, and explored function as a concept as well as conducting functional analysis of stone tools via wear traces. Her research is characterised by the extensive use of experimental archaeology and ethnographies, providing a detailed practical understanding of how materials can be transformed into material culture. She was the founder and first director of the MA in Experimental Archaeology and has been the Head of the Department of Archaeology and is now the Director of Research Postgraduates. Fieldwork projects have been undertaken in Europe and Pakistan and in recent years she has worked with a variety of craftspeople. In association with the National Museums Scotland and a network of colleagues she led a study on touch experiences in museums using traditional and digital technologies to provide haptic experiences. She is currently writing a book on organic material culture - the 'missing majority' of prehistoric material culture – and her current research projects include working with Prof Robert van de Noort and the National Maritime Museum (Cornwall) to build a full size sewn plank boat based on archaeological finds from the Early Bronze Age.

Board Member: Dr Julia Heeb (DE)
Period: 2019-2021
After completing my AHRC-funded M.A. in Experimental Archaeology at the University of Exeter in 2006, I knew that I wanted to work further in the field of Experimental Archaeology. In November 2007, I co-organized the second Experimental Archaeology Conference at Exeter University after receiving an AHRC grant for my PhD at the same institution. After two maternity breaks, I finished my PhD on an experimental approach regarding the shafthole copper axes from southeastern Europe in 2012. Between 2012 and 2015 I worked freelance based in Berlin, offering research and educational services for museums and translations of academic texts. In March 2015 I started working at the Stiftung Stadtmuseum Berlin in the Archaeological Open-Air Museum "Museumsdorf Düppel" and the archaeological collections. I am responsible for the archaeological collections, general research, exhibitions and experimental archaeology.

Board Member: Annemarie Pothaar BA MA (NL)
Period: 2020-2023
Ms drs Annemarie Pothaar (1977) Master of Arts in Heritage Education & Interpretation. After studying a bachelor degree of Leisure Studies in Rotterdam NL, Annemarie finished her Master of Arts degree (2001) in the UK at Newcastle University and was supervised by Dr. Peter Stone, one of the UKs leading specialists in heritage education. Since then she has worked for a national park, historical museums, archaeological open-air museums and the Dutch Royal Armouries. Annemarie is a visitor experience and interpretation developer, specialising in engaging visitors through a variety of interpretive techniques and encouraging learning in informal and formal heritage encounters. She is charmed by the use of live historic costumed interpretation, but makes use of the full possibilities of the interpretive mix, to find the right medium for each situation. She uses the latest insights and methodologies on cultural heritage-, intergenerational- and family learning to develop informal learning solutions. Her motto is engage, relate, reveal from Freeman Tilden. In her time off, you can find her in museums and heritage sites, performing live historic costumed interpretation and visiting international museums and heritage sites to get new ideas and compare best practices. Continuous professional development is very important to her and Annemarie plays an active role in European partnerships programmes by sharing knowledge and hosting workshops. Currently Annemarie is working towards the Associateship of the Museum Association.

Board Member: Dr Peter Inker (USA)
Period: 2019-2021
I began working in archaeology in 1985, excavating and experimental archaeological reconstruction of a medieval village at Cosmeston, Wales, UK. Since then extensive experience in field Archaeology and research, with concentration on late Roman and Migration Period material culture studies. I gained my BA (hons), MA and PhD at the University of Wales looking at early medieval metalworking techniques. The EXARC Charter is officially in Dutch (attached at the end of this file). What follows is an official translation into English, which can also be found at: https://exarc.net/about-us/charter.

Charter

At the EXARC AGM in March 2007 in Pitlochry, Scotland, there was plenty of discussion about the goals and mission of EXARC in respect to its charter. Therefore, a charter commission was founded to advise the EXARC Board. Examples were reviewed from Scotland, Sweden and the Netherlands as well as international organisations like ICOM, AEOM, and EXAR. The commission convened in September 2007 in the Middelaldercentret (DK) and presented the board with a draft for a new charter soon afterwards. The EXARC Charter, as registered with the Notary in Eindhoven (NL) on 22 December 2009 follows below.

Name and seat

Article 1

1. The association bears the name: EXARC, for “International Association of Archaeological Open-Air Museums”. An archaeological open-air museum is a non-profit permanent institution with outdoor true-to-scale architectural reconstructions primarily based on archaeological sources. It holds collections of intangible heritage resources and provides an interpretation of how people lived and acted in the past; this is accomplished according to sound scientific methods for the purposes of education, study and enjoyment of its visitors.

   It has its seat in the municipality of Eindhoven.

   The association is entered into for an indefinite period.

2. The association year runs from the first of January through the subsequent thirty-first of December. The financial year is concurrent with the calendar year.

Object

Article 2

The object of the association is: the investigation, contextualisation, presentation and interpretation of archaeological and experimental archaeological heritage, with an emphasis focusing on, but not limited to, archaeological open-air museums. The association does not have the intention of earning profit.

The association endeavours to achieve its object in part by:

1. Improving professional standards and promoting professional ethics.

2. Providing advice, information, practical tools and, where possible, learning opportunities to members, potential members and other interested parties in relation to their academic, technical, practical and organisational aspects.

3. Issuing publications (directly or indirectly) and providing opportunities for members to meet, such as conferences and study trips.
4. Actively representing the interests of the members and bringing matters of interest to them to the attention in the relevant discussions at the regional, national and international levels.

5. The development of marketing opportunities for the members and the distribution of knowledge and information about the members and the objectives of the association.

The members

Article 3

1. Members of the association may be institutional members or individual members:
   - Institutional members:
     Institutional members are legal persons: archaeological open-air museums or non-commercial institutions actively involved in and endorsing the object of the association.
     Decisions on admission to the association are made by the Board of the association.

   - Individual members:
     Individual members are natural persons with a professional affiliation with or involvement in archaeological open-air museums, as well as persons active in the field of experimental archaeology.

2. Members apply in writing to the Board for membership. The Board will maintain a register recording the names and addresses of the members. This register will be accessible to all members.

3. Membership ends:
   a. by cancellation by the member in observance of the provisions of article 5
   b. by cancellation by the Board, as described in article 3.4
   c. by removal, as described in article 3.5
   d. upon the demise of a member

4. Cancellation by the Board must be effected by registered letter and is only allowed when the association cannot reasonably be required to allow the membership to continue.

5. The Board may remove a member if the member acts in violation of the charter, bye-laws or decisions, unreasonably compromises the association, or fails to meet the obligations the member is under pursuant to article 4.

Article 4

Members are obliged:
   a. to pay the contribution proposed by the Board and adopted by the meeting of members; members joining during the association year owe the full contribution. In the event a member cancels membership or if the membership is terminated before the end of the association year, the association does not owe any repayment of the member's contribution
   b. to comply with the provisions of the charter, bye-laws and decisions of the association

Article 5

Members are authorised to cancel their memberships in observance of a notice period of at least thirteen weeks prior to the end of the association year. The authorisation to immediately cancel the membership if a member's obligations are increased, or if the member's rights are restricted, is excluded insofar as pertaining to the member's monetary obligations.

The Board

Article 6

1. The Board is charged with the leadership of the association, including the supervision and monitoring of compliance with the charter and bye-laws of the association and the decisions of both the Board itself and the meeting of members.
2. The Board is not authorised to enter into agreements to sell, alienate or encumber immoveable property without the authorisation of the meeting of members. The lack of this authorisation has effect in regard to third parties.

3. The Board will consist of at least five and at most nine natural persons, including a chairman, vice-chairman, secretary and treasurer. Board members may be suspended and dismissed by the meeting of members at any time.

4. A Board member is appointed by the meeting of members for a period of three years, and may be re-appointed immediately. The term of office is considered to end at the annual meeting in the calendar year three years after the calendar year in which the Board member was appointed.

5. Board membership ends:
   - after the end of the term of appointment
   - upon dismissal by the meeting of members
   - upon resignation by the Board member
Any premature vacancies on the Board will be filled in the next subsequent meeting of members; the interim Board member will take the place in the roster of the member whose membership was prematurely ended.

6. A departing Board member is obliged to immediately hand over to his/her successor all the documents, negotiable instruments, keys and other items in his/her possession attendant to the position, immediately and with proper proof of receipt.

7. The Board will represent the association at law and extra-judicially. If any member or members of the Board are absent, the remaining members constitute the Board. The association may be represented by two or more Board members.

8. The Board will meet as often as a Board member deems necessary. The Board may only adopt valid resolutions if at least two, or, if the Board consists of five or more members, at least three, Board members are present. The Board adopts resolutions with an absolute majority of votes. The bye-laws regulate the convocation and also set the order of the other aspects of the Board meetings.

9. The Board may, with the authorisation of the meeting of members, authorise third parties (specified by name) to represent the association. The authorisation will contain the name of the authorised third party and the duration and subject of the authorisation.

The meeting of members

Article 7

2. Resolutions of the meeting of members will be adopted by a simple majority of votes, excepting where stipulated otherwise in this charter. Each member has one vote. For the purposes of determining the majority of votes, invalid votes and blank votes are considered to be votes not cast. The meeting of members may adopt resolutions on subjects stated on the agenda enclosed with the convocation to the meeting.

3. If the meeting of members adopts resolutions on other subjects, these resolutions have no effect until four weeks after the resolution has been notified in writing to all members, unless within this four-week period the Board is requested to convene a meeting of members in a manner as described in articles 7.1 and 7.2, in which case the resolution becomes effective after being upheld by the meeting of members.
4. A member may authorise another member of the association (not being a Board member) in writing to exercise his or her voting right in the meeting.

Donors

Article 8

Donors are parties admitted as such by the Board.

Donors are bound by the charter and the resolutions of the Board and the general meeting. Donors will be admitted to the general meeting only if that meeting resolves to allow them admission. Donors will have no voting rights in the meeting.

The systems enacted in this charter for members in regard to the admission and cancellation, and the consequences thereof, will apply to donors to the maximum possible extent.

The general meeting will set the minimum amount (either per association year or as a lump sum) that a donor will owe to the association.

Donors may be asked to give a direct debit authorisation for automatic payment of the periodic contribution.

The secretary will maintain a register recording the names and addresses of the donors.

The resources

Article 9

1. The association’s resources consist of:
   - contributions, registration fees and membership dues
   - donations and subsidies
   - other resources

2. The treasurer will collect the contribution and donations and will manage the resources. After obtaining the permission of the Board, the treasurer may decide to deposit the resources that, in the treasurer’s opinion, are not required for the day-to-day management with a banking institution established in the Netherlands, or to invest them in negotiable instruments issued by the state of the Netherlands denominated in euro.

3. Within three months after the end of the association year, the Board will draft a balance sheet, a profit and loss account, and a budget for the running association year. The annual meeting will adopt these documents.

4. The adoption of the balance sheet and the profit and loss account over any association year will serve to discharge the Board for their administration over that year.

Amendment of charter

Article 10

1. Amendments to the charter and/or the bye-laws will be adopted by the meeting of members by a two-thirds majority of votes cast. A meeting of members with an amendment of the charter and/or bye-laws on the agenda will be convened in observance of a convocation period of at least four weeks. The convocation will give notice that the agenda contains an amendment of the charter and/or bye-laws, as well as what the proposed amendment entails.

2. An amendment of the charter will only take effect after the execution of the deed of amendment of the charter before a civil-law notary. An amendment of the bye-laws will become effective on the date of the amendment resolution or (if later) on a date referred to in that resolution.

Article 11

1. The association will be dissolved by a resolution of the meeting of members to that effect, in which case article 9.1 applies accordingly.

2. The liquidation of the association will be effected by the Board.
