B. Contribution of the organization to the implementation of the Convention at the national and international levels (Chapter III and Article 19 of the Convention, paragraph 156 of the Operational Directives)\(^1\)

Distinguish between completed activities and ongoing activities contributing to the eight thematic areas of the Convention's Overall Results Framework\(^2\), as well as to the preparation of periodic reports, nominations, proposals and requests under the Convention’s international cooperation mechanisms. If you have not contributed, this should be indicated. Also describe any obstacles or difficulties that your organization may have encountered in such participation.

B.1. Describe your organization’s contribution to strengthening institutional and human capacities for safeguarding intangible cultural heritage.

Not to exceed 250 words

The International Society for Ethnology and Folklore (SIEF) provides platforms for the exchange of information and dissemination of best practices among heritage practitioners. During its biannual congress, at meetings and conferences of its working groups, in summer schools, in list serves and through its publications, leaders of heritage organizations, policy advisors, researchers, archivists, museum professionals and policy advisors exchange information and engage in dialogue about their safeguarding experiences, organizational capacity building, inventorying, documentation and archiving. Their mutually supportive peer exchange of best practices contributes to the enhancement of ICH safeguarding in the 45 countries represented in SIEF’s membership. Our activities and publications provide ongoing forums for intangible cultural heritage professionals who often lack opportunities for such international dialogue and professional development activities generated as a result of interactions fostered by SIEF. These activities are carried out on an ongoing basis by SIEF’s working groups (and especially the working group on cultural heritage) which function as international networks for heritage professionals involved in research, inventorying, education, and archiving.

SIEF’s members are from States that include Ireland, the United Kingdom, France, Belgium, the Netherlands, Spain, Portugal, Switzerland, Germany, Romania, Ukraine, Iceland, Norway, Sweden, Finland, Denmark, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, Russia, Greece, Italy, Hungary, Czechia, Slovakia, Slovenia, United States, Canada, Israel, Turkey, Belarus, Croatia, Bulgaria and India.

B.2. Describe your organization’s participation in activities related to the transmission of and education for intangible cultural heritage. Explain, in particular, how your organization cooperates with communities, groups and, where relevant, individuals.

Not to exceed 250 words

SIEF’s summer schools in the last years have brought together faculty with heritage expertise, graduate students and community members actively involved in safeguarding ICH. Students learned about ICH issues and challenges in dialogue with community members. The 2022 summer school in Warsaw focused on urban heritage, including revitalization of the Praga craft community and engagement with local heritage activists. It also included dialogues on heritage policy and lectures on global heritage production, the politics of cultural heritage production in the post-socialist sphere and food as

1. In case your organization operates in several States, please indicate clearly which State or States are concerned by your answers where appropriate.

2. For further information on the Overall Results Framework, please refer to the Chapter 8 of the Basic Texts of the 2003 Convention for the Safeguarding of the Intangible Cultural Heritage: https://ich.unesco.org/en/basic-texts-00503 heritage. The 2020 summer school in Siena, Italy, held virtually because of the pandemic, featured online interactions with local heritage practitioners. This summer school focused on heritage policies as strategies for the promotion of traditions and challenges posed by tourism. Group field research brought participants into contact with grassroots ICH practitioners and bearers, including meetings with the Contrade that drive the Palio festival. The 2018 summer school in Portsoy, Scotland, Giving Voice? Facilitating Social and Community Resilience explored how communities reinvent themselves and repurpose the past while fostering traditions that change over time. It included extensive interactions with cultural activists dealing with the challenges and opportunities of ICH safeguarding and cultural tourism, and assisting with an annual boat festival.

SIEF’s Standing Committee on Higher Education in Ethnology and Folklore is devoted to strengthening cooperation in higher education. Together with the American Folklore Society it is developing a global interactive map of university departments and programs, including many that train ICH researchers and practitioners in genres of ICH, policy and practice.

Some years ago SIEF published a comparative map with university departments and programs in Europe.

B.3. Describe your organization’s participation in the inventorying and research of intangible cultural heritage. Explain, in particular, how your organization cooperates with communities, groups and, where relevant, individuals.

Not to exceed 250 words

Most of SIEF’s members are researchers, with many focusing specifically on ICH and/or related topics. They design inventorying programs in their countries, train community members in methods of inventorying and documentation, create ethical guidelines for research, inventorying and archiving, maintain archives that serve as repositories for inventorying and documentation, explore heritage making processes, and give communities a voice. SIEF members have been centrally involved in creating national inventories in multiple countries, including Estonia, Belgium, France, Germany, The Netherlands and Latvia, all in collaboration with communities. Our members also took leading roles in the UNESCO community-based needs identification of the living heritage of Ukrainian refugees living in Hungary, Moldova, Poland, Romania and Slovakia.

SIEF’s publications, meetings and online platforms frequently deal with best practices in inventorying and research that emphasize community collaboration. SIEF is prominently involved in promoting and advancing research, documentation and inventorying practices that involve co-curation and shared authority with community members. These approaches are modelled in our summer schools, which include group field research carried out in collaboration with community members, who learn from the technical and methodological expertise of the faculty.

Research by SIEF’s members encompasses a broad range of ICH topics, including heritage tourism, genres of ICH that include narrative, belief systems, foodways, material culture and performing arts; documentation practices and heritage policies on local, regional, national and intergovernmental levels. This research is published and reported in SIEF’s affiliated journals, Ethnologia Europaea and Cultural Analysis; its semi-annual newsletter, proceedings of its biennial Congress and in other publications and online platforms for both the general public and scholars.

B.4. Describe your organization’s participation in developing policies, as well as legal and administrative measures, for safeguarding intangible cultural heritage. Explain, in particular, how your organization cooperates with communities, groups and, where relevant, individuals.

SIEF’s position paper, SIEF and UNESCO: Making a Difference (SIEF-UNESCO position paper.pdf) emphasizes the use of methodologies that seek out and acknowledge the multiple voices that create culture, community, heritage and tradition. It views heritage as processual in character, possessing dynamics of innovation and change. In this document, SIEF indicates that its activities are carried out in a framework of informed consent by stakeholders, concretized through the use of informed consent documents.

The Archives Working Group of SIEF is a leader in developing policies relating to standards and practices for the management and long-term storage of records and archives which consist largely of ICH materials. It has formulated ethical policies regarding privacy and informed consent for the storing and sharing of research materials. These policies stress that caution must be observed with regard to materials which have been collected “under problematic political conditions, or have been shaped by social and cultural paradigms that are no longer acceptable”, such as among minorities and disadvantaged groups. The Archives Working Group emphasizes collaboration with source communities and facilitation of public access to archival collections.

Likewise, SIEF’s general statement on Data Management (SIEF_Statement Data Management.pdf) emphasizes the importance of handling ethnographic research materials in appropriate, and tailored, ways, taking into account that the materials are co-produced in the interaction of researchers and research participants. The key principle is consent.

SIEF members have created innovative, interactive archive web sites extensively used by source communities. Their archives of ICH materials are critically important for maintaining documentation of ICH obtained through inventorying projects for future generations and enabling use of these materials by bearers and their communities for current and future generations.

B.5. Describe your organization’s participation in promoting the role of intangible cultural heritage and its safeguarding in society. Explain, in particular, how your organization cooperates with communities, groups and, where relevant, individuals.

The membership of the International Society for Ethnology and Folklore is actively engaged in advancing understanding of the ICH Convention through their activities as researchers, educators and practitioners. Many of its members teach in colleges and universities, where students learn about the Convention and the practices, theories and policies of ICH. Their courses frequently deal with shared authority for heritage projects and community cultural self-determination. Their publications have been instrumental in broadening the understanding of heritage to broadly encompass ICH. As policy advisors, SIEF members shape the direction of cultural and educational policies in their States to integrally include ICH.

B.6. Describe your organization’s participation in raising awareness about intangible cultural heritage. Explain, in particular, how your organization cooperates with communities, groups and, where relevant, individuals.

In recent years ICH and the Convention have become an increasingly prominent feature of SIEF’s Congress, publications and social media. These activities raise awareness of ICH among SIEF’s members who are in the academic community and practitioners in heritage fields such as museums that are expanding their involvement with ICH. Members of the Heritage and Cultural Property Working Group, with over 80 members and the Archives Working Group, with over 60 members, are especially active in raising awareness of ICH within and beyond SIEF. Over the two decades SIEF members on the faculties of scores of colleges and universities on multiple continents have initiated courses on heritage topics that include ICH.

B.7. Describe your organization’s participation in facilitating the engagement of communities, groups and individuals, as well as other stakeholders, for safeguarding intangible cultural heritage.

SIEF’s members engage communities, groups and individuals as a central focus of their research and other activities. A growing number of members share authority for representation in safeguarding programs and inventorying projects. Many SIEF members teach in colleges and universities that have student populations with substantial representation of ethnic minorities and other cultural groups with strong ICH legacies. Their courses on ICH increase consciousness of local, ethnic and regional heritage and are stimulating involvement in ongoing ICH projects. SIEF’s Congress, publications and online platforms provided forums for sharing information and dialogue about ICH activities.

B.8. Describe your organization’s engagement in cooperation at the bilateral, subregional, regional or international levels for the implementation of the Convention, including initiatives such as the exchange of information and experience, and other joint initiatives.

All of SIEF’s activities involve members from multiple nations. They have leadership roles in consortia of ICH practitioners, such as the European Focal Points for the 2003 Convention and the regional consortium involving Nordic and Baltic nations. SIEF’s biennial Congress, biennial convenings of working groups, publications and online platforms are primary means for exchanging information and experiences relating to the Convention for hundreds of ICH practitioners.

B.9. Describe your organization’s involvement in or contribution to the drafting of the national Periodic Report on the implementation of the Convention.

As an international organization SIEF does not prepare Periodic Reports. Many of its members prepare these reports for their own State.

B.10. Describe your organization’s participation in the preparation of nominations to the Urgent Safeguarding List or Representative List, requests for International Assistance or proposals of Good Safeguarding Practices.

As an international organization SIEF does not prepare nominations to the Urgent Safeguarding or Representative List. Many of its members prepare nominations for their own State.
