6.c. Description of the organization's activities:

Not to exceed 750 words

Since its founding in 1968, CTMD has produced over 900 major presentations including concerts, festivals, tours, CD and film series, and lectures. Materials gathered by CTMD staff, folklorists, ethnomusicologists and community cultural specialists are the basis for subsequent artistic presentations and educational programming. CTMD-produced recordings, publications, and documentary films preserve and document cultural traditions and educate the public about the rich artistic heritage of New York's diverse immigrant/ethnic communities. Annually serving more than 100,000 artists, immigrant/ethnic community, and general audience members, CTMD's programs have a positive impact upon the continuous evolution of cultural traditions within a community and help to ensure that the artistic traditions, which define a community, continue to exist and have contemporary meaning for successive generations. Activities include:

- Community Cultural Initiatives – multi-year field research and presentation projects which help community and cultural activists, artists and educators within targeted immigrant/ethnic communities to preserve their cultural traditions;
- An-Sky Institute for Jewish Culture— a partnership with New York University, the JCC in Manhattan, the Workmen’s Circle and the Center for Jewish History to research and revitalize the practice of traditional East European Jewish performing arts;
- Masters on Stage— ongoing partnerships with major institutions (i.e., Lincoln Center, New York Historical Society, American Museum of Natural History, the Smithsonian Institution) that are designed to introduce leading practitioners of New York's rich immigrant expressive traditions to wider audiences;
- New York World Festival – a biannual event devoted each time to a different region of the world. Celebrating New York as the most culturally diverse city in the world, the festival acknowledges the vitality of immigrant and ethnic performing arts and their contributions to the New York City landscape;
- Touring Artists – a fee-based program designed to promote community-based artists and assist these artists access mainstream performance venues and media; and
- Archives/Dissemination – over the past thirty-five years, through extensive fieldwork and research, the Center has assembled one of the largest collections of urban immigrant and ethnic music anywhere in America. The collection includes audio and video recordings, photographic documentation and related ephemera on CTMD's presentations and programs. Sound and video recordings are published through CTMD's Ethnic Heritage Recording Series and the Global Beat of the Boroughs series in partnership with Smithsonian Folkways. A monthly eNewsletter provides news, events and information about NY’s traditional music and dance scene.

CTMD's programs and initiatives help build the cultural infrastructure within immigrant/ethnic communities by bolstering immigrant/ethnic artistic traditions within the community and introducing these time-honored and continually evolving traditions to larger, more diverse audiences.
7. Its experiences cooperating with communities, groups and intangible cultural heritage practitioners:

Not to exceed 350 words

Through its innovative Community Cultural Initiatives (CCI) program, CTMD has worked in partnership with artists, educators and traditional arts advocates to conduct multi-year research, documentation and presentation programs in a number of New York City-based immigrant groups, including the Albanian, Arab, Dominican, Irish, Indo-Caribbean, Central Asian, Chinese, Phillipino, Peruvian, Soviet Jewish, Ukrainian, Mexican and West African communities. While CCIs are deeply grassroots and NY-based, they produce ripples that can extend nationally and even internationally. In the 1970s, CTMD’s project to document and present Jewish klezmer music helped spark a worldwide revival. In the 1980s, CTMD helped form the renowned all-women’s ensemble Cherish the Ladies which inspired huge interest amongst women across North America and even Ireland in performing Irish music (previously a male-dominated activity). In the 1990s, CTMD was the first organization to introduce Indian Bhangra music to the US. And, in the last five years, CCIs have generated the first Mariachi academy on the East Coast as well as the first Peruvian music and dance school for youth in the US.

Staff Information

Eileen Condon, Ph. D., Project Director, holds an undergraduate degree from the University of Michigan and a Ph.D. in folklore from Memorial University of Newfoundland, Canada (1999). From 2004-2007, she served as Folk Program Director for the Dutchess County Arts Council, in Poughkeepsie, New York, where she organized the annual Hudson River Arts Festival, and researched and presented a variety of programs celebrating the folk music, dance, foodways, and other traditions of Latino, Asian, African-American, and other Dutchess County communities. From 1994 to 2003 Condon designed and taught courses in folklore and religion at the university level, serving for two years in an interdisciplinary endowed chair at the University of Toledo. Her field research and writings have focused on topics related to instrumental folk musics and popular religion. She currently serves as Editor of Voices, the Journal of the New York State Folklore Society.

Gabrielle Hamilton, Project Director at the Center for Traditional Music and Dance since 1999, is a folklorist with extensive expertise in Indigenous traditions of the Americas. She has served as the Director and Senior Researcher of the Repatriation Office at Smithsonian Institution’s National Museum of the American Indian (NMAI); conducted extensive research on the Native collections at Utah State University (where she received her Master’s Degree in Folklore) and currently serves as a consultant for Blood Tribe of the Blackfoot Confederacy, where she is an honorary member. At the Center, Ms. Hamilton conducts research into Peruvian traditions as expressed in the New York metropolitan area where she directs Pachamama Peruvian Arts which develops the Peruvian traditional performing arts in partnerships with local community organizations through educational classes, workshops and presentations. She also has lived and taught on the Navajo Reservation and in American Samoa; and has conducted folklore residencies for schools, museums, arts councils and prisons. Hamilton has been published in academic and popular journals and has been presented at numerous speaking engagements.

Jodi Hewat, Operations and Publications Manager, has worked as a multi-media designer and technology consultant since 1992. During her tenure at the Canadian Music Center, she designed CD packaging and event materials and developed a database and website for the organization. At Ariad Custom Communications, Ms. Hewat designed print publications, developed a variable data publishing production process, and implemented an Intranet. Ms. Hewat was also part of the technology team for Ariad. More recently, as Senior Art Director and Production Manager, she oversaw the design projects and implemented and administered a production network and technology plan for the design firm Jeffrey Leder, Inc. Ms. Hewat is the Director of the Center’s Technology Team overseeing the implementation of the organization’s major initiative to expand and enhance its technology infrastructure. Ms. Hewat is also the designer of the Center’s website (www.ctmd.org) and the organization’s publications.
Kaisha Johnson, Director of Artist Management, serves to introduce audiences to cultural traditions from around the globe through a diverse roster of touring artists. As director, she collaborates with major performing arts and cultural institutions to present vibrant ethnic artists and their extraordinary work. Most prior to her position at CTMD, Ms. Johnson worked and lived abroad in Argentina, developing her interest in the Latin American arts market. Formerly, Ms. Johnson held the position of Director of Programs for JazzReach Performing Arts and Education Association, Inc. During her tenure, she managed to help propel JazzReach from a small New York-based organization to a leading national non-profit with presence in scores of communities throughout the country. Currently, Ms. Johnson also serves as an arts consultant providing assistance to artists and non-profits in the form of grant writing and program development. She designs and implements integrated programs for the arts, while soliciting funding from private, government and corporate sources. With over 10 years experience in the music and performing arts industries and an active member of the Association of Performing Arts Presenters (APAP), Ms. Johnson has formerly held positions at Herbert Barrett Management and Warner Music. She holds a Bachelor's degree in music from Hampton University, a Master of Arts in music business administration from New York University and has done post-graduate work in the field of ethnomusicology at the City University of New York.

Riley Jones-Cohen, Controller, has extensive financial management experience. Before joining the Center for Traditional Music and Dance, Ms. Jones-Cohen was Business Manager for Haleakala (dba The Kitchen) and was the accountant for a number of other not-for-profit organizations. She currently serves as Executive Director of The Workshop Theater Company, an off-Broadway developmental theater company. Ms. Jones-Cohen has additional theatrical experience having worked on and off Broadway as a stage manager, wardrobe supervisor, set decorator and production manager.

Tema Fishbein, Development Director, provides fund raising counsel and develops and implements the Center’s annual fund raising campaign. Prior to joining CTMD, Ms. Fishbein served as an Assistant Professor in the Arts Management Program at American University, and prior to this was Program Director for the New York Arts Recovery Fund, a program of the New York Foundation for the Arts which awarded $5 million in grants to individual artists and arts organizations to assist their recovery from financial harm as a result of 9/11. Prior to this she served as Associate Institute Director of the Limon Dance Foundation and Education Director for the Mark Morris Dance Group. She holds a Master’s of Public Affairs in Finance and Management from the Columbia University School of International and Public Affairs and a Master’s in Dance/Movement Therapy from Hunter College, City University of New York. For fifteen years she maintained a private Psychotherapy and Dance/Movement Therapy practice.

Ethel Raim, Artistic Director, is a leading supporter of and advocate for community-based traditional arts. With funding from the Smithsonian Institution, the International Research and Exchanges Board, the New York State Council on the Arts and the National Endowment for the Arts, Ms. Raim has conducted extensive research, spanning 30 years, in the expressive folk traditions of urban American immigrant communities.
She was a researcher and program specialist for the Smithsonian Institution's Festival of American Folklife from 1969 to 1974 and, in 1976, became Co-Director, with Martin Koenig, of the Balkan Arts Center – which was renamed the Ethnic Folk Arts Center in the 1980s and later the Center for Traditional Music and Dance. She developed many of the innovative program models for which the Center is best known, including the Center’s Community Cultural Initiatives – long-term projects designed to establish and nurture community-based artistic documentation and presentation in New York’s immigrant communities. Under the leadership of Ms. Raim, the Center has become one of the nation’s leading proponents of what the late Alan Lomax called “cultural equity,” the right of every community or ethnic group to express and sustain its distinctive cultural heritage.

Peter Rushefsky, Executive Director, prior to joining the Center for Traditional Music and Dance in January of 2006, Mr. Rushefsky built a highly successful track record of operational and financial leadership experience in the not-for-profit health care field. He served as Executive Director of Univera Healthcare-Southern Tier and Vice President/Chief Operating Officer of Lifetime Health in Syracuse, NY. Mr. Rushefsky is a leading authority on Jewish klezmer music as well as an internationally acclaimed performer and teacher who has authored a number of published articles about traditional music and has served on the faculty of prominent Yiddish cultural programs. Through his work on a variety of community boards including Buffalo Jewish Federation and the Buffalo Junior Chamber of Congress, Mr. Rushefsky has spearheaded significant fundraising and community-building activities. A passionate advocate of traditional performing arts, Mr. Rushefsky earned his B.S. from Cornell University and holds a Master’s in Health Services Administration from the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor.

Thomas van Buren, Ph D., Archive Director, is an ethnomusicologist with experience in research and event publication and production on a wide range of ethnic music traditions. Since joining the Center for Traditional Music and Dance in 1994, he has coordinated the production of major public programs including the Maharjan al-Fan at Brooklyn Museum of Art (1994-95), the Folk Parks festivals in Brooklyn, Manhattan and The Bronx (1994-96). Dr. van Buren has been Project Director for the Center’s Dominican, West African and Filipino Community Cultural Initiatives, a model collaborative effort designed to establish and nurture community-based artistic documentation and presentation projects in ethnic communities throughout the New York metropolitan region, for which he curated programs and produced from community centers to Lincoln Center. He has produced four major compact disks for the Center, including three issues in the Global Beat of the Boroughs series on Smithsonian Folkways Recordings label. Currently, he is directing the Chinese Community Cultural Initiative. He earned a doctoral degree in Ethnomusicology from the University of Maryland, College Park (2001). Prior to joining the Center, he conducted research in Dominican music in Providence, RI; interviews and analysis of African music of Uganda and Gambia; and research in Afro-Cuban music in Matanzas, Cuba, Washington DC and New York. He has ten years experience teaching music and multicultural studies in New York, China, Rhode Island and Maryland. A clarinet and saxophone player, he has also directed the jazz ensemble at the University of Maryland, Baltimore (1991-94).

JOSEPH P. BORCHARD
SECRETARY OF STATE
Dear friends,

The sixth annual New York Spring Folk Festival is hosting two notable performers: Libby McCall and Martin Kennedy. McCall, a veteran of the world folk scene, will present her unique brand of music, which combines traditional Irish and American ballads with contemporary themes. Her engaging performance will be complemented by the skilled accompaniment of Martin Kennedy, who will showcase his mastery on the accordion. The festival promises to be a memorable event, with both performers bringing their own distinct styles to the stage.

Martin Kennedy is not only a renowned accordion player but also a respected composer and arranger. He has collaborated with many artists across various genres, and his contributions have been celebrated worldwide. His presence at the festival will undoubtedly add to the rich tapestry of music being offered.

In addition to these performances, the festival will feature a workshop on traditional instruments, led by experts in the field. Participants will have the opportunity to learn from the masters and enhance their skills. The festival is an excellent opportunity for folk enthusiasts and musicians to gather, connect, and celebrate the timeless art of folk music.

So, mark your calendars for April 15-21, 1974, at the Sixth annual New York Spring Folk Festival. Join us for an amazing event that will leave a lasting impression on all those who attend.

Sincerely,

One of the nation’s pioneering folk arts organizations, the Center for Traditional Music and Dance has helped New York City’s immigrant communities maintain the vibrancy of their unique cultural heritage for 40 Years. Nationally renowned for programs that combine research, documentation, presentation and education, CTMD assists immigrant communities in passing traditions to new generations. CTMD has worked closely with dozens of diverse communities over the past 40 years in creating a number of leading ensembles, festivals and community-based cultural organizations.

Each year, CTMD serves thousands of New Yorkers through a full calendar of programs that provide unique opportunities to experience and participate in the City’s rich cultural traditions.

- CTMD’s flagship Community Cultural Initiatives program helps immigrant communities build institutions to preserve traditional folk arts, through in-depth program presentation and technical assistance.

- Through the CTMD Sharing Traditions program, hundreds of children in immigrant neighborhoods learn the traditional music and dance forms of their community, creating new generations of artists and audiences.

- CTMD’s Touring Artists program helps master traditional artists perform on some of the most prestigious stages in the country.

- CTMD’s Archive holds the nation’s largest collection of video and sound recordings of New York immigrant performing arts traditions over the past 40 years.
